The Journal of Dental Sciences (JDS), published quarterly, is the official and open access publication of the Association for Dental Sciences of the Republic of China (ADS-ROC). The precedent journal of the JDS is the Chinese Dental Journal (CDJ) which had already been covered by MEDLINE in 1988. As the CDJ continued to prove its importance in the region, the ADS-ROC decided to move to the international community by publishing an English journal.

Excerpt from American Journal of Dental Science, 1879, Vol. 12 The fourth article of the accepted creed and its twin brother, a tooth that can be filled at all, can be filled with gold, seem to me such perfect puerility that. I have no patience with them. This latter enunciation is from our good friend Tatt's last work on Dentistry up to the present status of the profession, the preface says. Excerpt from American Journal of Dental Science, 1900 The principles involved in the treatment of caries occurring on the approximal surfaces of bicuspid are so similar to those occurring on like surfaces of molars that they will be considered as one class of cavities. Minor differences in the detail of the work will, it is true, be called for, but these are readily suggested by the differences in the forms of the teeth. The position and function of bicuspid and molars are nearly identical, and they are subject to practically the same influences leading to decay primarily and to a recurrence of decay around fillings. The same forces are at work to dislodge fillings, and the same general plan of anchorage must be pursued in the one as in the other. For these reasons they are treated in common. Excerpt from The American Journal, of Dental Science, 1884, Vol. 17 Mr. W. Milles said he had been asked to say a few words on the subject under discussion, and he should confine his observations more particularly to the points which Mr. Underwood and himself had been studying together, the action of micro-organisms in the production of dental caries. They found in all cases of caries micro organisms were present in certain definite lines. In the most superficial part of caries the tubes were broken up.
