Academic Paper from the year 2019 in the subject Chemistry - Analytical Chemistry, grade: A, , language: English, abstract:

This text is focussing on the effectiveness of oxidizing reagents in removal of blood stains. Adjustments, amendments, and concealing of the crime evidence have resulted in an increment in the world's crime rate. One such recurring hindrance can be seen with the most vital forms of evidence; bloodstains. Bloodstains are considered to be one of the most difficult stains to remove and even after cleaning them off the clothes through the detergents available in the market, there are some colored traces left which do not disappear completely and can be detected. Forensic scientists use luminol to detect bloodstains which when reacted with iron in blood stains exhibit chemiluminescence. This led to thinking of to what extent were these criminals able to manage the escape by washing the stains and hinder the evidence. After researching about the detergents from journals and websites like "The Science of Stain Removal, Study of Oxyper-  $H_2O_2$ , and Study of sodium perborate" and also studying the effect of various compounds present in them, it was found out that the active oxygen reagents were the sources through which bloodstain removal was possible. This helped in framing a research idea: To what extent does the change in mass of the oxidizing reagent, sodium perborate, sodium percarbonate and hydrogen peroxide found in detergents is effective in removing bloodstains, measured by spectrophotometric analysis of change in chemiluminescence intensity of luminol due to the oxidation of ferrous to ferric ions in stock solution containing oxidizing agents and iron solution imitating blood at room temperature (30°C)? In this essay, the correlation between the removal of the stains and the extent to which it depends on the amount of reagent was measured.

The decrease in chemiluminescence signifies the extent to which the stains are removed. On this basis, the cleansing action of various oxidizing agents like hydrogen peroxide, sodium perborate, and sodium percarbonate was compared. Seeing the competence of the strongest oxidizing reagent, it can be considered that this research will be useful for forensic science departments to detect the extent to which evidence was tried to be concealed as all the oxidizing agents contain H<sub>2</sub>O<sub>2</sub> and even after washing the clothes, some content of H<sub>2</sub>O<sub>2</sub> is left. It will also be valuable for the detergent manufacturers because, through this research, they will opt for a better oxidizing agent to yield a better cleansing action.

most unusual weapon: a trident. In each case, arrests were made, suspects confessed their crime and were sentenced to life. One slightly worrying detail: all the presumed murderers lost consciousness during the night of the crime and cannot remember whether they actually did it or not. Commissaire Adamsberg is convinced all the murders are the work of one person: the terrifying Judge Fulgence. Years before, Adamsberg's own brother had been the principal suspect in a similar case and avoided prison only thanks to Adamsberg's help. History now repeats itself when Adamsberg, who is temporarily based in Quebec for a training mission, is accused of having savagely murdered his young lover. In order to prove his innocence, Adamsberg must go on the run from the Canadian police and find Judge Fulgence. The heir to Maigret, Commissaire Adamsberg is back in a new

What does being an archaeologist mean to Indigenous persons? How and why do some become archaeologists? What has led them down a path to what some in their communities have labeled a colonialist venture? What were the challenges they have faced, and the motivations that have allowed them to succeed? How have they managed to balance traditional values and worldview with Western modes of inquiry? And how are their contributions broadening the scope of archaeology? Indigenous archaeologists have the often awkward role of trying to serve as spokespeople both for their home community and for the scientific community of archaeologists. This volume tells the stories—in their own words-- of 37 indigenous archaeologists

'There are murders and there are murders. There are bodies and there are bodies, and then there's what lies waiting behind the front door of the little brick house with its blinds drawn and air conditioner droning on, working against the oppressive Hunter Valley heat. A glimpse into the dark, cockroach corners of the soul. A lot of the blokes at the scene that day will never be the same.' On 29 February 2000, Katherine Knight committed an unspeakable act. A mother of four and a grandmother, she seduced and then stabbed John Price 37 times. A former abattoir worker, she skinned him. A loving partner, she cooked him with vegetables, making a soup with his head. Made gravy. Left him on plates for his family. Why? Pricey was her de facto and he wanted out. She didn't like that. People said that most of the time Katherine Knight seemed normal . until she got angry. She was judged to be legally sane when she committed a crime so horrible that the media shied away from the detail. Journalist Peter Lalor covered the trial and wanted to know what made Knight go way over the borderline. In this unflinching account he uncovers the layers of her dysfunction, opening the door of 84 St Andrews Street and taking us into the lives of Knight's ex-partners, her family and the locals of Aberdeen, NSW. Katherine Knight is currently the only woman serving a life sentence in Australia. She is never to be released.
