Stabilization. The hyperinflation crisis led prominent economists and politicians to seek a means to stabilize German currency. In August 1923, an economist, Karl Helfferich, proposed a plan to issue a new currency, the "Roggenmark" ("rye mark"), to be backed by mortgage bonds indexed to the market price of rye grain. The plan was rejected because of the greatly fluctuating price of rye in ...

Hyperinflation in the Weimar Republic

In the case of Weimar hyperinflation, in common with Helfferich (1969 [1927]), Modern Monetary Theorists recognize that news of the acceptance of the London Ultimatum prompted heavy speculative selling and depreciation of the mark, and the German government ' s purchase of foreign currencies (both directly from exporters and via the Agent General 15) at the higher market prices was a continuing, downward redefinition of the value of the mark. And the corresponding increases in import prices ...
