Dali's exhibition for the occasion, Dream of Venus, was created as a surrealist interpretation of a carnival funhouse. The "surrealist house" was first conceived by Julien Levy, a New York art dealer who was inspired by the 1938 Exposition Internationale du Surréalisme in Paris. The house intended to convey the core tenants of surrealism to a mass audience, combining humor and artifice with the popular fair ride and allowing surrealist artists a space for experimentation.

The Dream, 1931 by Salvador Dali. Courtesy of www.dalipaintings.com. The Dream gives visual form to the strange, often disturbing world of dreams and hallucinations. Ants cluster over the face of the central figure, obscuring the mouth, while the sealed, bulging eyelids suggest the sensory confusion and frustration of a dream. The man at the far left - with a bleeding face and amputated left foot - refers to the classical myth of Oedipus, who unwittingly killed his father and married his mother.

It was in the midst of this funfair for the common man that Salvador Dalí created the Dream of Venus, a Surrealist funhouse that seemed to have little connection with the main exhibition. Its stucco façade, adorned with organic pro-truberances reminiscent of coral or sea anemones, harked back to the Art Nouveau architecture of his fellow-Catalan Gaudí, which was rather out of keeping with the fair's ostensibly forward-looking theme.

Life Magazine wrote that one funhouse at the 1939 World's Fair stood out among the others: "Dal's Dream of Venus, the creation of famed Surrealist painter Salvador Dal, is the most recent addition to the still-growing list of amusement-area girl shows and easily the most amazing. Weird building contains a dry tank and a wet tank. In the wet tank girls swim under water, milk a bandaged-up cow, tap typewriter keys which float like seaweed. Keyboard of piano is painted on the recumbent female figure made of rubber. In dry tank...a sleeping Venus reclines in 36-foot bed, covered with white and red satin, flowers, and leaves. Scattered about the bed are lobsters frying on beds of hot coals and bottles of champagne....All this is most amusing and interesting." The building's modern, expressionistic exterior, with an entrance framed by a woman's legs, and shocking interior, including the bare-breasted "living liquid ladies" who occupied the tanks, caused quite a stir. The funhouse was so successful that it reopened for a second season, but once torn down it faded from memory and its outlandishness became the stuff of urban myth. Now, more than 60 years later, a collection of photographs of the Dream of Venus by Eric Schaal has been discovered. In stunning black-and-white and early Kodachrome, they show both the construction and the completion of the funhouse—from Dal painting a melting clock to showgirls parading for their audience. Salvador Dal's Dream of Venus reveals not only an eccentric work of architecture, but also a one-of-a-kind creation by one of the most fertile imaginations of the 20th century.

The recent exhibitions dedicated to Botticelli around the world show, more than ever, the significant and continued debate about the artist. Botticelli Past and Present engages with this debate. The book comprises four thematic parts, spanning four centuries of Botticelli's artistic fame and reception from the fifteenth century. Each part comprises a number of essays and includes a short introduction which positions them within the wider scholarly literature on Botticelli. The parts are organised chronologically beginning with discussion of the artist and his working practice in his own time, moving onto the progressive rediscovery of his work from the late eighteenth to the turn of the twentieth century, through to his enduring impact on contemporary art and design. Expertly written by researchers and eminent art historians and richly illustrated throughout, the broad range of essays in this book make a valuable contribution to Botticelli studies.

Surrealism, magic realism and expressionism are the hallmarks of Jose Rivera's influential body of work. This new volume collects three of the author's plays: References to Salvador Dali Make Me Hot, a lyrical blend of poetry, passion and a woman's longing: Sueno, a reworking of Calderon's Life is a Dream and Sonnets for an Old Century, a series of monologues which examines what it means to be alive and the traces that each of us will leave behind.
