Part I : The Mitchell movement and its derivatives

Mitchell movement works the best when there is a odd number of complete tables. In this case, if there are N tables (2N pairs), a complete movement contains N rounds, all NS pairs meet all EW pairs once, and all boards are played N times, producing two separate ranks: one for NS and one for EW. If only one winner is intended, arrow switch is used.

Director's Guide - The SOCIAL BRIDGE Club

A duplicate bridge movement is a scheme used in a duplicate bridge tournament to arrange which competitors play which opponents when, and which boards they play. The arrangement has to satisfy a number of constraints which often conflict to some extent, and compromises may be required.

Duplicate bridge movements - Rules and strategy of bridge ...

A movement that is 'rotary' in nature — that is, a one-winner design such that the moving pairs follow each other around the room in an uninterrupted pattern — lends itself to the use of table guide cards, which eliminate the necessity of providing said instructions in another way. The so-called Howell movements and certain Individual and Team-of-Four schedules fall into this category.

Contract Bridge | Howell Guide Cards | Ted's Bridge World

The two most common movements in bridge, Mitchell and Howell, pre-date the game of bridge itself, and were used for duplicate whist tournaments. In the 1970s, a director named John Harris, who went by the nickname of “Spider,” invented a general movement that would have every player in the game playing the same group of boards.

What is this Web movement? – BridgeFeed

Web movements are like Mitchell movements in many respects: ? NS pairs are stationary. ? EW pairs move up a table after each round. ? If d is even, EW pairs skip a table after round $d/2$. (Note that in a Mitchell movement $d \neq t$, so you can think of an even t requiring a skip after round $t/2$. In a Web movement, $d < t$. A skip is needed if d is even, regardless of whether t is even, and the skip ...
