Iron Condors Explained | Online Option Trading Guide

The iron condor is a trading strategy for options that uses two spreads, both vertical. One is a call (which is the option to buy), and the other is a put (the option to sell). The iron condor gets its name from the shape of the profit and loss graph it creates. An iron condor appears vertically, composed, again, of four trades - calls and puts. Options: Calls and

Iron Condor - Overview, How It Works, Profit and Loss

The iron condor is a strategy that can be used for investors wanting to collect income. However, traders can also use them as well. For example, technicians can construct trades using support resistance lines, while volatility traders can take a non-directional view and directly trade their view on volatility.

Here's what you should know

When trading iron condors, you generally want to collect about 1/3 the width of the strikes of the spreads. For example, in the DIS example below, the strikes for each side were 2$ wide (105-107 and 116-118). That's about $200, and a best practice for how much should be collected is about 1/3 the width, or at least 66$ on entry.

The iron condor is an option trading strategy utilizing two vertical spreads - a put spread and a call spread with the same expiration and four different strikes. A long iron condor is essentially selling both sides of the underlying instrument by simultaneously shorting the same number of calls and puts, then covering each position with the purchase of further out of the money call and put respectively. The converse produces a short iron condor. The position is so named because of the ...

Ratio. Because we already know maximum profit ($274) and maximum loss ($226), we can calculate the risk-reward ratio. It is 1 : 274/226 or 1 : 1.21. In other words, potential profit from the iron condor in our example is 1.21x the risk. The general formulas (for an iron condor with equal width of the two wings) are the following:
