The questions on this paper are designed to challenge you to think, not to guess, hence the penalty marking. You will gain more marks, and more satisfaction, by doing one question carefully than by guessing lots of answers. This paper is about solving interesting problems, not about lucky guessing.

Last year I participated in the UKMT Maths Challenge which is a yearly challenge at three levels open to secondary school students. It is a multiple-choice maths test that translates maths skills we are taught in lessons into real-life questions and problems to solve, which then gives you a result of either gold, silver or bronze.
